How Hanover Research Can Support Program-Project Grant Initiatives

Large programmatic grants can position your organization for multi-million dollar funding pools. They also take hundreds of hours to complete and require skillful coordination across program-project teams that span organizations, states, and even continents to consolidate all proposal components.

Hanover Research’s Grants Consultants (GCs), relying on over one hundred years of combined experience in the field of grant development, can support your program-project grant initiatives needs by serving as an expansion of your project team. These tiers of support push your grantseeking forward, helping your organization submit competitive proposals and develop sustainable programmatic infrastructure.

You need: An expert in grant development that can understand proposal and agency nuances to competitively reframe and realign proposal components

How can Hanover GCs help?
- Provide in-text editing and review for grammar, content, layout, style, and formatting
- Grade proposal alignment with the funding requirements outlined in the grant solicitation
- Prepare an edited version of the proposal and separate review report written in the style of the agency of interest

You need: Help managing large research core teams and different program stakeholders to ensure you complete all necessary proposal sections prior to the submission deadline

How can Hanover GCs help?
- Assign proposal responsibilities and timelines to different PIs
- Provide consultative review of each proposal element as it is created
- Edit for “one voice,” ensuring your proposal is cohesive and maintains internal integrity throughout the grant narrative

You need: A content expert that can write the grant proposal to the fullest extent possible

How can Hanover GCs help?
- Turn previous grants, publications, literature reviews, program design input, and notes from the PI team into a cohesive grant narrative
- Leverage previous agency experience to align nuanced proposal components
- Collaborate with program teams to ensure the proposal narrative accurately articulates the project’s goals, components, and outcomes
